

WASHINGTON, May 15.

The trial of the conspirators will continue to-morrow in open court, reporters being admitted yesterday. The Committee on the Conduct of War, however, has voted to omit the publication of such evidence as may be deemed prejudicial to the public interest.

A number of important testimony has been taken, which will not be published for the present, as its bearings on the extent of the conspiracy and motives of the conspirators in it are not regarded as proper until all full development has been made.

The associated press has made arrangements with the public, proceedings of the trial, as far as possible, will be placed on trial before the same, on the same charge as preferred against the conspirators.

No person will be admitted to the court to-morrow without a proper pass from the authorities.

The Richmond Whig of yesterday alludes to the march of Sherman's army through that city. The Army of Georgia, Major-General W. N. Slocum, composed of the 14th corps, Maj.-Gen. Jeff C. Davis, and the 20th corps, Maj.-Gen. Pomeroy, was occupying all the day in passing through. No military parades such as is due in this army were witnessed by the citizens except the spectators of the display.

One characteristic feature distinguished the Army of Georgia from the Army of the Potomac, in that it was composed of men from the Western men, in place of the close skull-cap of the Potomac army. The men, too, appeared to be in better discipline, and marched in close order.

Up to the time of writing the 14th corps has passed, the 20th corps was on the passage, and the 15th corps is now in the rear.

The Committee on the Conduct of the War is continually in session here, and their work will be completed in a few days. The Senate, however, was not appointed, except that on the part of the Senate, Buckwalter succeeds President Johnson, and on the part of the House, Louis T. Wigfall, of Texas, is appointed in his place.

The testimony is all taken, and nearly put in form, except that of Grant and Sherman, and that of the extreme West, and that concerning the series of battles between Grant and Lee, from the Rappahannock to the Appomattox, and of the Army's march through the rebellious States as the war approaches its conclusion.

The Army have departed from the character of critics to that of historians. The testimony and documents they have received will form when completed a history of the war.

Four more are to be given to the country, and four more are going to press.

It is probable also, that the eighth volume will be published in a few days, and the replies of Grant and Sherman in detail, to the questions framed by the committee. It is understood, however, that the committee will not sit to the trust between Sherman and Joe Johnston.

Gen. James Harlan, of Iowa, has returned from the West, and will be soon sent to the Committee on the Conduct of the Interior. Secretary Usher will take leave of the Department, and in a few days return to his home in Ireland.

President Johnson invited the new Secretary most cordially to remain. The appointment was tendered him by Mr. Lincoln some time before he left for Europe.

A letter from Havens, received here, states that it was recently reported that Macmillan's French Minister had been sent to Paris to confer with the new French Minister there as to the relations between the United States and France.

The writer also mentions the rumor that Macmillan, owing to the failure of the South to secure its independence, had gone to Mexico, and intended to abandon the country.

It is further added that the success of the Liberator has been a great blow to the South.

A large number of officers belonging to Sherman's army have arrived here from Richmond.

The advance of the army had left Richmond on the 1st, and reached the city of Alexandria. General Sherman is momentarily expected here. His arrival to have been delayed by the fact that he had in close contact some prominent confederates among the officers of his army now here.

Washington, May 15.

The Memphis of Monday was introduced to the President by the Acting Secretary of State, and delivered his credentials as Minister to the United States. The Memphis made some remarks on the occasion, of which the following is a translation:

"Mr. President: I have the honor to place in your hands the copy of my commission from the French, which accredits me in the character of Envoy Extraordinary near your Excellency. I have the honor to assure you that I bring with me His Imperial Majesty to give me this distinguished mark of his confidence. I can attribute little to the success of my mission already attained to this country, but I am already prepared to do more, and I am now more than ever prepared to serve His Imperial Majesty, and to assist him in his efforts to secure the independence of the South.

"The writer also mentions the rumor that Macmillan, owing to the failure of the South to secure its independence, had gone to Mexico, and intended to abandon the country.

It is further added that the success of the Liberator has been a great blow to the South.

A large number of officers belonging to Sherman's army have arrived here from Richmond.

The advance of the army had left Richmond on the 1st, and reached the city of Alexandria. General Sherman is momentarily expected here. His arrival to have been delayed by the fact that he had in close contact some prominent confederates among the officers of his army now here.

Washington, May 15.

The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army, engaging the services of the best men in the War Department, and many of the leading commanders.

"The command as to which troops will be mustered and which retained is not yet fully decided, but it is probable that those whom terms expire next October will first be sent to the South.

"The Tribune's special says: "The report of the work of re-organizing the army,